Olympic
WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT COUNCIL
SERVING CLALLAM, JEFFERSON, & KITSAP COUNTIES

Olympic Workforce Development Goals and Objectives 4-year Plan

Required 2-year update

1. Support active collaboration with education and training systems within each county to enable flexibility and agility to meet the talent needs of businesses and industries. (III)

2. Support the creation of relevant and adaptable support systems that include wrap-around services and resources to assist individuals in their success. (I)

3. To promote the council's ability to make data-driven decisions. (IV)

4. Foster demand-driven skill attainment with the current and future demands of the industries. (II)

5. Implementation and continuous improvement of local policies and practices. (V)

6. In concert with the three-county Economic Development Alliances, ensure the advancement of local community initiatives and industry needs.(I)

7. Support reaching individuals in rural areas with significant barriers to ensure equitable access. (II)

8. Implementation of service delivery models via virtual services and connection points in rural partner locations. (III)

9. Build a collaborative relationship with our region's tribal communities.. (III)

10. Creation of a OWDC Strategic Workforce Development (SWP) Coalition.

The V Pillars

I. Industry Driven Strategies

II. Worker Mobility

III. Integrated Systems

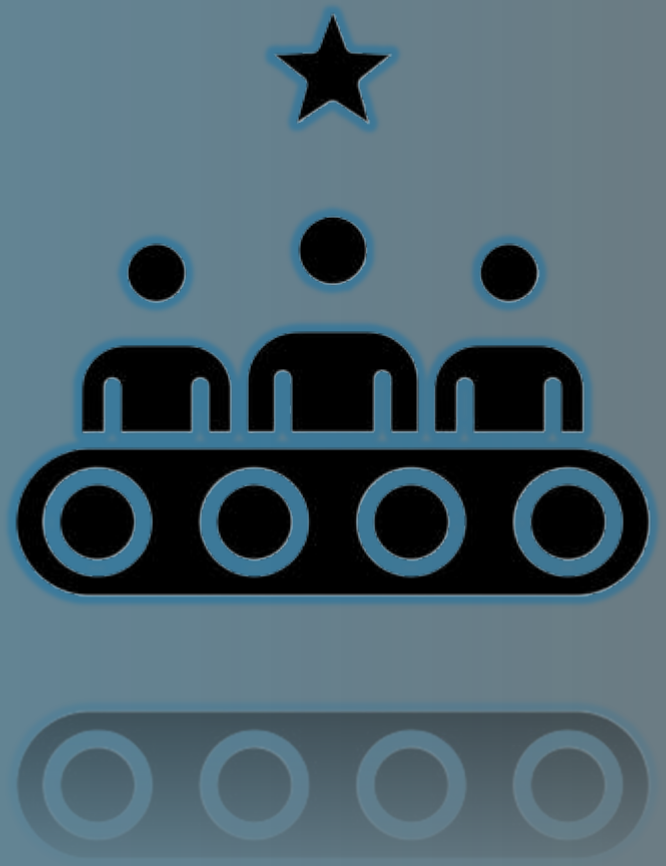

IV. Accountability

V. Flexibility & Innovation

Asking the question, how does the workforce partnership in Olympic do these things?

Pillar I: Industry Driven Strategies

Transform the workforce system into a reliable pipeline of talent

- Aligning education and training with in-demand industries and occupations.
- Expanding Registered Apprenticeships and high-quality work-based learning.
- Supporting employer-led training and upskilling strategies.
- Coordinating with industry to address evolving skill needs.

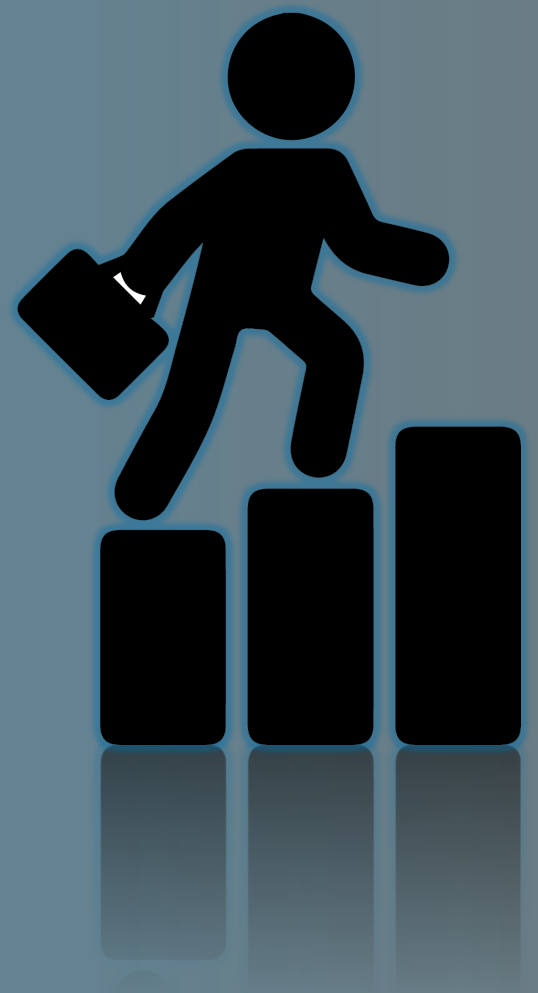

Pillar I: Industry Driven Strategies

Which strategy offers the greatest opportunity to strengthen our region's alignment between workforce training and employer needs over the next two years?

A. Strengthen employer engagement to better understand workforce needs.
B. Expand registered apprenticeships and other earn-and-learn opportunities.
C. Increase work-based learning opportunities, including internships and on-the-job training.
D. Align training investments with the skills and credentials employers need.
E. Strengthen partnerships with employers in our region's priority industries.

Pillar II: Worker Mobility

Support individuals in entering, re-entering, and advancing in the workforce

- Promoting credentials that are valued in the labor market.
- Using labor market data to inform career pathways and decision-making.
- Supporting skills-based advancement through competency-based approaches.
- Connecting individuals—especially those disconnected from the workforce—to training and employment opportunities.

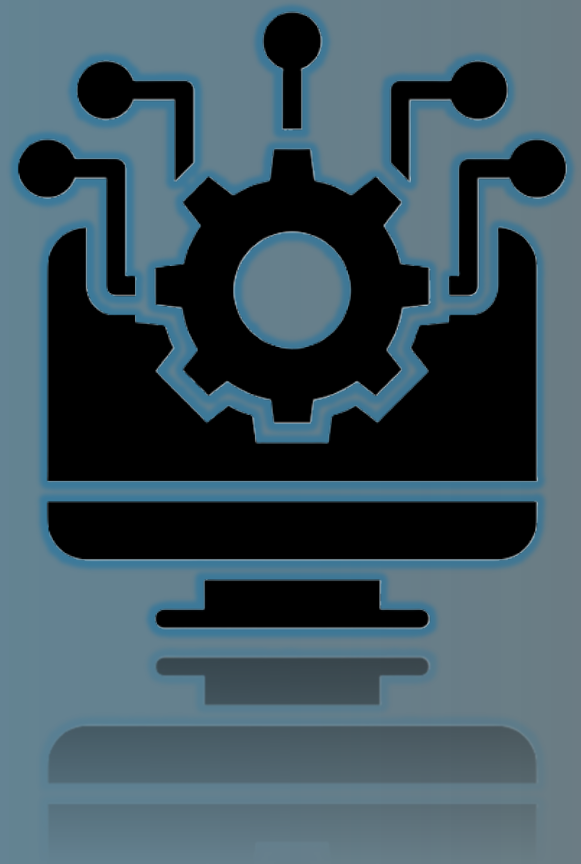

Pillar II: Worker Mobility

Where should we focus to help workers access better career opportunities and advance in our region's labor market?

A. Expand access to industry-recognized credentials that lead to good jobs.
B. Use labor market data to guide decisions, training, and workforce investments.
C. Create clearer pathways for skills-based hiring, career advancement, and wage growth.
D. Reconnect people who have left the workforce with employment and training opportunities.

Pillar III: Integrated Systems

Streamline and coordinate workforce programs to reduce fragmentation and improve access

- Aligning programs, funding streams, and service delivery across partners.
- Improving coordination of intake, referrals, and service navigation.
- Reducing duplication across programs and agencies.
- Creating a more unified and accessible system for customers and employers.

Pillar III: Integrated Systems

Working together to deliver seamless, coordinated workforce services

Partner Coordination
One-Stop System, MOU/IFA, Shared Responsibilities and Partner Collaboration

Expanded Access
Connection Sites, Rural Outreach, Community Partnerships, Virtual Services

Integrated Services
Coordinated Referrals, Wrap Around Services

Aligned Pathways
Education, Training and Employer Partnerships Aligned with Regional Needs

Are we operating as one integrated workforce system, or are we still operating primarily as individual programs and organizations?

What is one opportunity to improve coordination and create a more seamless experience for job seekers and employers?

Pillar IV: Accountability

Ensure workforce investments are tied to measurable outcomes and program effectiveness

- Using performance data to assess outcomes and return on investment.
- Aligning funding with programs that demonstrate results.
- Improving transparency and consistency in performance measurement.
- Strengthening accountability for employment, earnings, and career outcomes.

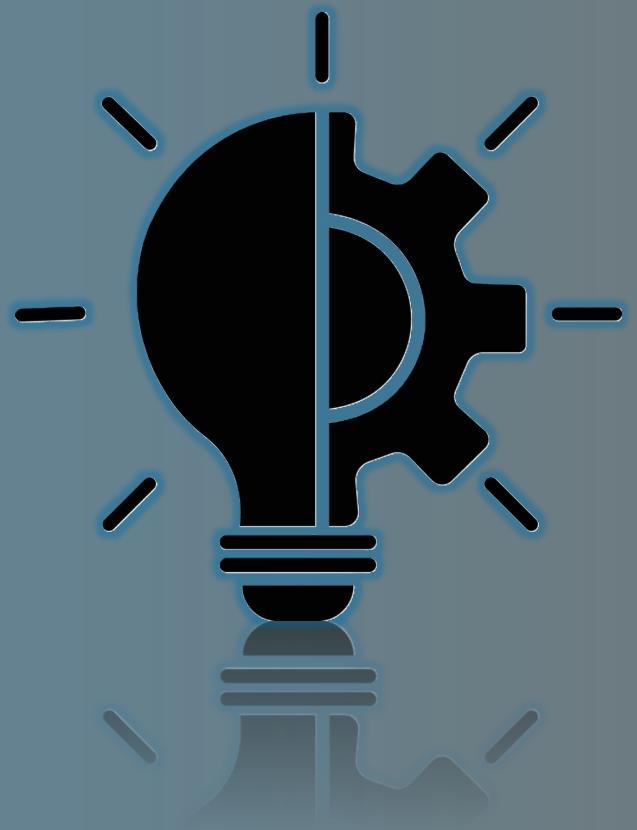

Pillar IV: Accountability

Which area should be our greatest priority to strengthen accountability and ensure workforce investments are delivering meaningful results for our communities?

A. Measure what matters: Focus on employment, earnings, and long-term career outcomes—not just participation and program completion.
B. Invest in what works: Use performance data and return on investment to guide funding toward programs that demonstrate results.
C. Improve transparency: Strengthen consistency in how workforce outcomes are measured, reported, and shared with partners and the public.
D. Connect funding to outcomes: Improve coordination among workforce partners to align resources with programs and services that produce positive results.

Pillar V: Flexibility & Innovation

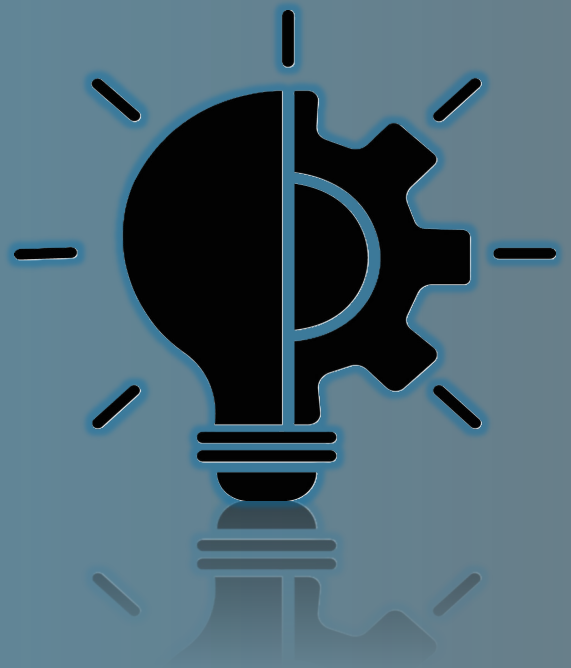

Promote innovation and adaptability to respond to changing workforce, economic and technological conditions

- Supporting AI literacy and integration into workforce strategies.
- Encouraging innovative training and service delivery models.
- Leveraging flexibility in funding and program design.
- Piloting new approaches to rapid reskilling and workforce development.

Pillar V: Flexibility & Innovation

Adapting how we prepare job seekers, support employers, and deliver workforce services

1. Prepare for Change - AI literacy and emerging technologies
2. Rethink Service Delivery - innovative training & service delivery
3. Adapt Program Design – funding & program design to changing needs
4. Test New Approaches – rapid reskilling & workforce strategies

Where can we be more flexible and innovative?

What is one new approach we should consider testing over the next two years?

Discussion & Questions

Olympic Region Fall Partner Training

September 28, 2026 | Event Summary and Outcomes

Event Overview

The Olympic Region successfully hosted its Fall Partner Training on September 28, 2026, bringing together more than 40 workforce development professionals for a full day of learning, collaboration, and professional development. Held at a community center overlooking Island Lake in Silverdale, the scenic setting provided a welcoming environment for participants to connect, reflect, and strengthen regional partnerships.

Attendees represented both WorkSource offices and a broad range of workforce system partners, including the Employment Security Department (ESD), Olympic College, Division of Vocational Rehabilitation (DVR), Department of Services for the Blind (DSB), Department of Labor & Industries (L&I), Olympic Educational Service District (OESD), Senior Community Service Employment Program (SCSEP), and the Olympic Workforce Development Council.

The training was designed in response to identified staff development needs, emphasizing practical skills, accessibility, emerging technologies, and employee well-being.

Training Highlights

Leveraging Artificial Intelligence in the Job Search – Jermane Easterlin

This session explored practical applications of artificial intelligence to support customers in their job search. Participants learned effective prompting techniques and strategies for using AI tools to enhance employment preparation. The presentation directly addressed the growing need for digital literacy and staff familiarity with emerging technologies.

Blind Etiquette and Supporting Customers with Vision Loss – Bianca Kolle, Department of Services for the Blind

Through hands-on demonstrations and interactive activities, participants learned best practices for assisting customers who are blind or have low vision. The session covered appropriate techniques for navigation, seating assistance, and customer interactions while highlighting DSB programs and referral resources. This training reinforced the region's commitment to accessible, inclusive service delivery.

Self-Care and Workplace Well-Being – Rachael Clark, AARP/SCSEP

The final session focused on employee wellness and strategies for managing stress in customer-facing environments. Interactive group activities encouraged participation, strengthened connections among partners, and brought renewed energy to the afternoon. The session emphasized the importance of staff well-being in maintaining quality customer services.

Participant Feedback and Outcomes

Post-training survey results reflected a positive participant experience and demonstrated the value of continued regional professional development.

- 81% of survey respondents indicated they would recommend the training.

- All three presenters received ratings of 4 out of 5, reflecting positive feedback across training topics.
- More than 40 workforce professionals participated, strengthening cross-agency relationships and shared learning.

Participants frequently identified the AI and DSB presentations as particularly valuable. One respondent highlighted "learning more about AI and serving sight-disabled" customers, while several described the DSB presentation as "super interesting."

Beyond the training content, attendees emphasized the importance of connecting with colleagues. Participants valued the "fellowship with other attendees during the lunch period" and the opportunity for "gathering the offices and state partners."

One participant captured the collaborative spirit of the event:

"The people and partners I get to work with are wonderful. The way everyone chooses to show up and participate is the most valuable part."

Feedback also suggested allowing additional time for networking and partner engagement at future events, reinforcing the importance of relationship-building within the regional workforce system.

Operational Considerations and Continuous Improvement

A key objective was ensuring staff from both WorkSource offices could participate in shared professional development. Unfortunately, last-minute staffing constraints prevented a previously coordinated coverage arrangement with ESD from being fulfilled, resulting in the temporary closure of the WorkSource Clallam office for the day.

While this presented an operational challenge, it identified an opportunity to strengthen contingency coverage planning for future events, balancing staff development opportunities with continued customer access to services.

Looking ahead, the region will continue using staff feedback and partner input to guide professional development priorities, with an ongoing focus on digital literacy, accessibility, customer-centered service delivery, and employee well-being. Future training events will also consider additional opportunities for networking and collaborative learning.

Conclusion

The Fall Partner Training was a successful example of regional collaboration and responsiveness to identified workforce development needs. Strong participation, positive survey results, and practical, relevant training demonstrated the value of investing in staff development.

Beyond strengthening individual skills, the event reinforced the relationships, shared knowledge, and collaborative culture essential to delivering an integrated, accessible, and customer-centered WorkSource system.

Voice of the Customer: Customer Satisfaction

During October 2026, the first month of the new program year, the Olympic Region received 16 customer satisfaction surveys, including 13 from WorkSource Kitsap and three from WorkSource Clallam/Sequim. The regional average experience rating was 8.88 out of 10. Overall, 87.5% of respondents reported receiving all the services they needed, and 100% indicated they would recommend WorkSource.

WorkSource Kitsap

WorkSource Kitsap received 13 responses, with an average experience rating of 8.62 out of 10. Approximately 85% reported receiving all the services they needed, and all respondents indicated they would recommend WorkSource.

Customers highlighted helpful, knowledgeable staff and assistance with résumé development, job searches, and career guidance. One respondent reported a lack of follow-up, identifying an opportunity to improve communication and service responsiveness.

WorkSource Clallam

WorkSource Clallam/Sequim received three responses, including two from Jefferson County customers served in Sequim. All three respondents rated their experience 10 out of 10, confirmed receiving the

Success Stories

Clallam County

After several years as a seasonal firefighter, a customer sought more stable employment but faced an unexpected setback when a desired position was eliminated. With a degree in biology, the customer explored alternative opportunities and began working as an on-call substitute teacher.

Following the first day, the customer reported enjoying the work, opening a potential new career direction. This story highlights the value of recognizing transferable skills and exploring alternative employment pathways when circumstances change.
